Professor John C. Rolfe, Ph.D., of the University of Pennsylvania and President of the Classical Association of the Atlantic States, says:

"I have been waiting until I could say with truth that I had read your History of Classical Philology, and this I can now do. I enjoyed it greatly, and it seems to me an exceedingly good book. This is one of the few places where a course in the history of classical philology is given, and I shall put your book into the hands of my students next year . . . I have been much pleased to find in the book some things which I had thought myself, but much more that is new. It will, I am sure, be exceedingly useful; and what is not common in such books, it may be read with pleasure".

From the Philadelphia North American (Nov. 4th):

"In this book, combining biographical and annalistic methods, what is customarily voted a dull, pedantic and inconsequential science is invested with genuine sympathy and interest. The simple device of identifying the personalities of great scholars with their works, together with large gifts of graphic and picturesque statement, enable Dr. Peck to present classicism in new and seductive forms, clearly related to and allied with the scholarship of the current period".

The Essentials of Latin Syntax—90 cents

The Essentials of Greek Syntax—$1.25

By Charles Christopher Mierow, Instructor in Classics in Princeton University

In Part I of each, these manuals present in clear and compact outline the essential facts of grammar. Part II of each gives English exercises for translation, illustrating definite points in construction: in Latin Syntax based on Caesar and Livy; in Greek Syntax based on Xenophon, Lysias, and Plato's Apology. As review books they are invaluable since they give a rapid survey of Syntax as an organized whole.

HALE'S LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION

By WILLIAM GARDNER HALE, Head of the Latin
Department, University of Chicago.

Cloth, 50 cents.

The book plans as much material only as can be written in one year; this is assumed to be one lesson a week. The entire ground may therefore be covered without leaving gaps in the pupil's study of constructions. The work is confined to those constructions which are common in Caesar. The sentences are not longer than those in other books, but they follow the narrative, are continuous, and are sensible.

The book contains a vocabulary, and most helpfully arranged tables of case-uses and mood-uses. References are given to all the grammars in common use.
